Upon All Its Amendments to the Naval Appropriation Bill,

Mr. Riddleberger Fails to Get Action on the Free Bridge Project.

Mr. Wilson's Brief but Highly Effective Speech in Relation to Interstate Commerce.

The House Occupied Both Day and Night With Pension Bills,

THE SENATE.

The chair laid before the senate a message from the house non-concurring in the senate amendment to the naval appropriation bill, with the exception of the amendment providing for the armament of the steel cruisers already in course

Mr. Hale, in moving that the senate insist on its amendments and appoint a committee of conference, said that the house had rejected the amend-amendments and appoint a committee of conference, said that the house had rejected the amendments providing for the additional cruisers for the completion of the iron-clad monitors; for fitting up the navy yards in order that they may be enabled to compete with naval builders, the amendment reviving the gun foundry board, and that providing for additional guns and armanent for the navy generally.

Mr. Hale's motion was agreed to.

Mr. Sherman, from the committee on the library, reported favorably, and the senate read three times and passed the joint resolution authorizing the chancellor of the Smithsonian institution to appoint an acting secretary for the institution to appoint an acting secretary for the institution to appoint an acting secretary for the institution to appoint an institution of the silk fing presented to the senate by Mr. Joseph Newman, of California, being the first American flag made of American silk. The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. Biair, from the committee on education and labor, reported favorably the house bill to establish and maintain a bureau of labor satistics.

The bill was placed on the calendar, and Mr. Biair gave notice that at an early day he would sak the senate to take it up.

The senate took up the bill reported by Mr. Plumb, from the committee on agriculture and forestry, to enlarge the powers and duties of the department of agriculture, and forestry, to enlarge the powers and duties of the content we department of the government, under the supervision of a secretary of sgriculture, to receive the same salary as the secretaries of the other executive department.

Mr. Kenna offered as a substitute the bill herectione submitted by him. The substitute the powles for the creation of an executive department, to be known as the department of industries, to be in charge of a secretary of industries. The sdepartment is comprise separate divisions of agriculture, commerce, manufactures, &c., to be under the supervision of experts in the several subjects of division.

Mr. Bayard thought the subject covered by the the supervision of experts in the several subjects of division.

Mr. Bayard thought the subject covered by the bill and substitute (as contemplating an addition to the cabinet officers of the government) to important to be disposed of or properly debated with out careful examination of the measures presented. The matter went over for the present.

After the passage of some private bills, the senate reached the bill to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Fotomac river at the Three Sisters, near deorgetown. After debate by Messrs. Riddleberger, Ingalis, and Harris, it went over for the present.

At 2 o'clock Mr. Wilson ad ireased the senate on his joint resolution, recently submitted, and the several bills aiready introduced relating to interstate commerce. The field of legislative action covered by the measures referred to was not, he said, a new one. I was an old field with new occupants. How best to treat it and them was a problem which would be worked at long and diligently before a complete solution would be found. It was so complete with that we might well be content to work it out by sections. The forces which had evolved the unexampled conditions of devopment and progress in the United States had been both subtle and aggressive. So moiselessly had they wrought in their ceaseless advance that we had but imperfectly understood them, and so rapid and wondrous had been their results that our attention had been fixed upon the facts, and we had been unmindful of the causes that produced them.

While our material resources had been rapidly advancing our science of law making had not kept pace with our necessities. We had not been able to fit our laws to the new conditions; hence we pathfully felt the joil and friction of our onward movement.

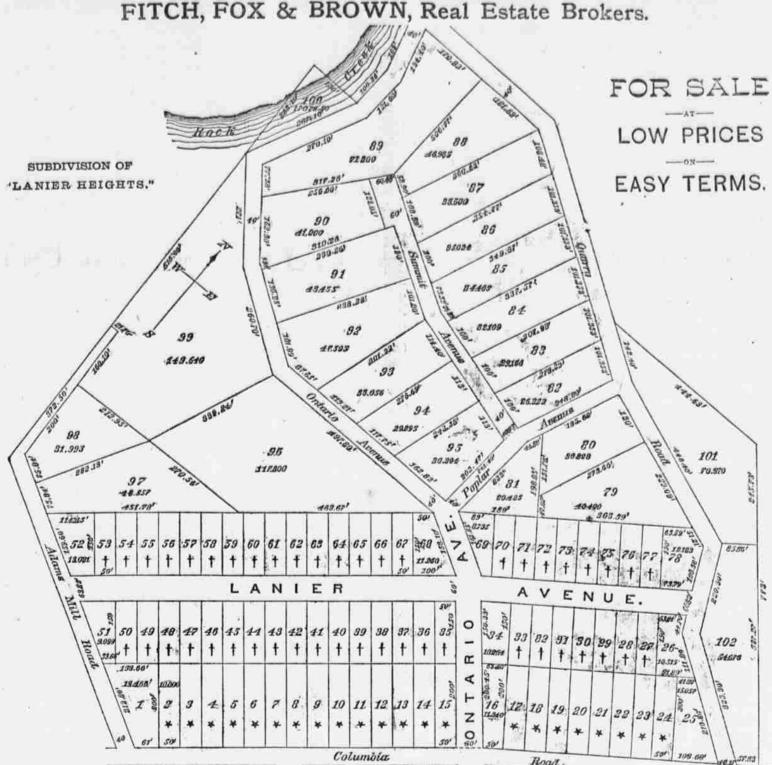

Mr. Wilson was not unmindful of the great difficulties surrounding the question, but

Mr. Wilson reviewed she history of railroad growth in the United States, and, continuing, said that for many of the complications resulting from shat growth the national and state governments were integly responsible. They little thought how a free servant may in time become a master, and so then retrained from hampering and retraining the railroad. When new lactors in civilization first appeared they were likely to be added that the powers given and grants made to railroad companies would lead to the results that followed. They were regarded as agencies to build up cities, unfold the riches of unoccupied regions, and promote the general welfare. There had been a failure to duly consider the checks and balances necessary to keep the railroad in harmony with the many delicate interests which it affected. Experience had been needed to sow the harmini effects of its unegulated management. Now the demand of the people in oil parts of the country was that the received in the proper in oil parts of the country was that the received in the proper in the parts of the country was that the received in the proper in the parts of the country was that the received in the proper in the parts of the country was that the received in the proper in the parts of the country was that the received in the proper in the parts of the country was that the received in the proper in the prope bill.

On motion of Mr. Plumb, the senate insisted on its amendments, and the chair appointed Messrs. Flumb, Allison, and Beck a committee on the part of the senate to confer with a like committee on the part of the house on the disagreeing votes of the two houses.

On motion of Mr. Allison, the senate also agreed.

THE HOUSE. In his prayer yesterday morning the chaplain of the house invoked the Divine protection on the Greely relief expedition and the Divino aid for a successful termination of its mission. On motion of Mr. Weaver, of Nebraska, a bill was passed changing the name of the Marsh Na-tional bank of Lincoln, Neb., to that of the Capital National bank, with an amendment. Up to the hour of 2.30 the time of the committee was consumed in the consideration of the bill for the relief of Myra Ciark Gaines. At that hour the committee arose to enable Mr. Randail, of Pennsylvania, to submit the conference report on the little dediciency bill. He explained that the main point of difference between the two houses was so a senate amendment striking out the clause prohibiting volunteer service in any of the departments in advance of appropriations. The conference committee had agreed upon a compromise retaining the prohibition, but excepting from its provisional cases of emergency involving life and property.

The report was agreed to and the committee of the whole resumed its session.

After further discussion the Gaines bill was laid aside, with a favorable recommendation. It authorizes the issue of patents for so much of the 3,457 acres claimed by Mrs. Gaines as have not been disposed of by the United States, and provides that she shall be paid at the rate of $1.25 per acre for such as have been disposed of such of the committee roce.

A bill was passed for the relief of Santiago De Leon. Leon.

The unfinished business coming over from last Friday was the bill relieving certain soldiers of the late war from the charge of desertion.

Mr. Steele, of Indiana, moved to refer the bill to the committee on military affairs.

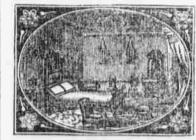

Pending a vote, the hour of 5 octock arrived, and the house took a recess until 729, the evening session to be for the consideration of pension bills. The house at its evening session pension bills, and then (at 930) adjourned until to-day.
